0:00 Chapter 1: The man who trains alone

The story begins in Nogales, Mexico, with a quiet, mysterious man named Bryant. Bryant lives alone and keeps to himself. Nobody in town really knows who he is or where he came from. But every single morning, he follows the exact same routine. He trains alone, practicing martial arts with incredible discipline and precision. And there is one person who never misses this show. A teenage boy named Oscar.

Oscar watches Bryant train from a distance almost every day. He is so hooked on Bryant's movements that he completely loses track of time. That's one of the reasons Oscar is late to school again and again. Remember this habit, because this one boy watching from a distance is what eventually pulls Bryant's whole hidden past back into the open.

Oscar's life is already complicated. His older brother Hector is in prison, which leaves Oscar without anyone to guide him. And the people around him are not good influences either. Hector was part of a gang. And while Hector is locked up, his fellow gang members are the ones looking out for Oscar. They even give him money for gas. But in this world, nothing is free. That money is a loan, and the gang expects every bit of it back.

1:03 Chapter 2: The gas debt

The problem is, Oscar can't pay them back. And the gang members are running out of patience. They keep pushing him for the gas money, and their threats keep getting more serious.

Meanwhile, Bryant has noticed something. The kid who keeps staring at him every morning. Bryant notices Oscar.

Then one day, the gang members spot Oscar on the street. He still doesn't have their money. So they chase him through the streets. And right then, Bryant is sitting nearby, quietly having his coffee. He sees the whole thing happening.

And this is where Bryant steps in. He deals with the gang members chasing Oscar and gets the kid out of trouble. A man like Bryant could have walked away after that. But he doesn't. Instead, Bryant starts teaching Oscar martial arts.

Bryant shows Oscar how to move. He teaches him how to defend himself and how to counter an attack. Most importantly, he teaches him how to stay calm in the middle of a fight. But Bryant makes one thing very clear from the start. What he is teaching is for self-defense only. It is not for becoming a street fighter.

Oscar loves every minute of the training. He becomes more and more confident. And slowly, he starts to believe he can become a real fighter. Which is exactly what Bryant warned him about.

2:10 Chapter 3: Hector comes home

Then Hector gets out of prison. Oscar is thrilled to have his big brother back. But the excitement doesn't last long. Because as soon as Hector sees Bryant, he gets suspicious.

Hector studies Bryant's posture and the way he carries himself. To Hector, this man looks like a cop. He suspects Bryant might actually be a police officer. Oscar tells him that Bryant is just his teacher and his friend. But Hector doesn't buy it.

And Hector's return brings something else back into Oscar's life. His old gang connections. The same gang members Oscar owes gas money to are now even closer to the family.

Soon, Hector finds out that Oscar has been training with Bryant. And Hector doesn't see self-defense. He sees an opportunity. Oscar can fight. And Hector needs money. So Hector starts pulling Oscar toward the underground fighting world.

Before long, Oscar is standing inside an illegal underground fight. And this place is nothing like a normal gym. People are betting on the fighters. Money is changing hands everywhere. And the fighters are expected to entertain the crowd, no matter how badly someone gets hurt.

One fighter here has already made a name for himself as one of the toughest in the place. They call him The Collector. Oscar watches another fighter get badly beaten. Anyone with sense would walk out after seeing that.

3:19 Chapter 4: Oscar vs The Collector

But Oscar does the opposite. Out of nowhere, he decides he is going to fight. Even Hector is surprised. But Oscar steps in anyway.

At first, it looks like Oscar has made a terrible mistake. The Collector is bigger, stronger and far more experienced. One clean hit from him could end everything. But Oscar remembers everything Bryant taught him. He doesn't try to overpower The Collector. He moves quickly. He stays out of the way of unnecessary attacks. And he waits, calmly, for an opening.

And then the opening comes. Oscar takes it, and he defeats The Collector. The crowd goes crazy. A teenage kid has just beaten one of the most experienced fighters in the place.

Oscar also gets paid for the win. And that money matters, because the gang members have been demanding their gas money for a long time. With his winnings, Oscar is finally able to pay them back and settle that gas debt. To Hector, his little brother's fists suddenly look like a way out of all their problems.

But someone in the crowd was recording the fight. Oscar's victory is now on video. And that one video is about to cause far bigger trouble than any gas debt.

4:20 Chapter 5: The video reaches Sonny

Elsewhere, in prison, a man named Sonny Kilbane gets a visit from a man called Piro. Sonny is a powerful criminal who is serving a double life sentence. And during this visit, Oscar's fight video lands in front of him. As Sonny watches Oscar fight, something catches his eye. The way this kid moves looks very familiar. The fighting style reminds Sonny of Bryant.

Sonny wants to know where the fight happened. When he learns it was in Nogales, Mexico, everything clicks. That means Bryant, the man Sonny has a history with, may finally have been found. So Sonny gives an order to the Guzman twins, two dangerous professional killers. Their job is to find Bryant.

Back in Nogales, Hector has no idea what is coming. He has his own plan. He wants Bryant to train Oscar properly, like a professional. So Hector takes Oscar to Bryant's house and asks him to train the boy. Bryant refuses. He doesn't want Oscar anywhere near professional or criminal fighting.

Hector gets angry. The argument keeps getting worse, until Hector pulls out a gun and threatens Bryant. But Bryant doesn't panic even a little. He pulls out his own gun and calmly tells Hector to move. And in that moment, Hector realizes this is not a man he can scare. He backs off to his car.

Oscar feels terrible, because he knows all of this happened because of him. He apologizes to Bryant. But Bryant tells him not to come back. Even so, Oscar still believes Bryant truly wants to help him.

5:38 Chapter 6: Strangers at the gym

Later, Oscar and Hector go to an MMA gym, because Oscar wants to sign up. He wants to keep training and become a real, legitimate fighter. A girl named Marisol is there, helping out at her father's gym.

Right then, two big men walk up to them. They say they are interested in Oscar, because they have seen his fight. It sounds like good news. But Hector quickly realizes something is off. These men aren't here to recruit anybody. They are looking for Bryant.

When the men ask where Bryant is, Oscar and Hector act like they have no idea. Eventually the men leave. But Oscar is now really worried. He knows Bryant is in danger, and it's because of his fight video.

Oscar begs Hector to let him warn Bryant. Hector says no at first. After all, the last time they went to Bryant's house, guns came out. But Oscar won't stop insisting, and finally Hector agrees. Oscar also says Marisol should come with them. So the three of them head to Bryant's house.

Marisol walks up to Bryant first. She tells him that people are looking for him, and that he should listen to Oscar. Oscar explains exactly what happened at the gym. And now Bryant's face turns serious. He asks them one question. Did they come here straight from the gym? Oscar says yes.

And that's when Bryant understands the mistake. Those men could have simply followed them here. Bryant tells everyone to get in the car and leave right now.

6:54 Chapter 7: The Guzman twins attack

But it's already too late. The Guzman twins attack, and they start shooting at Bryant's house. Bullets hit the walls from outside. But here is the thing. Bryant's house is heavily reinforced. The bullets don't get through the way the killers expect.

Bryant watches the attackers on his security cameras. That means he knows exactly where each of them is at all times. And then he fights back. The twins are professional killers. But Bryant is far more experienced than they are. He takes down the first twin and kills him. Now only one twin is left. Bryant wants to know who sent them. But the second twin refuses to talk. And instead of telling Bryant who is behind the attack, he sets himself on fire and dies. That's how far these people will go to protect their boss.

Now there is no point in hiding anymore. After the attack, Bryant finally tells Hector and the others the truth. And here it comes out that Bryant used to work with the LAPD and the DEA. Hector was right after all. He just didn't know how right.

Bryant had gone undercover against a huge criminal organization. This group dealt in drugs, illegal weapons and human trafficking. The man connected to all of it was Sonny Kilbane. Kilbane had influence over corrupt officials and even people inside law enforcement. Bryant's investigation helped bring the organization down and put Kilbane in prison.

8:05 Chapter 8: Why Bryant is as good as dead

But Bryant's success came with a terrible price. His enemies found out there was someone he loved. Her name was Heather. Heather was Bryant's wife. Since they couldn't easily get to Bryant himself, they went after the person closest to him. They found Heather and brutally attacked her.

After seeing what they did to Heather, Bryant understood something painful. As long as he stayed connected to her, she would always be a target. So he came up with an extreme plan to disappear.

Bryant told Heather to claim that he had assaulted her. It was a false domestic-violence story. And it gave Bryant a believable reason to vanish. Instead of people thinking he went into hiding because criminals were hunting him, they would think he ran away because of the accusation.

Heather stayed behind in their old city, while Bryant disappeared to Mexico. In a way, he made his own version of witness protection. He didn't trust the official system to keep him or the people he loved safe. So he chose to become invisible. To the outside world, Bryant was practically dead. And this is where the title of the movie finally makes sense. Bryant had made himself as good as dead.

Bryant also shows them something else. There is a secret tunnel underneath his property. The tunnel was first discovered through DEA work. And Bryant deliberately built his house in this exact spot, because the tunnel could be his escape route. He shows Oscar and the others how to use it to get away safely.

Bryant's past keeps catching up with him. His former colleague, Bo Davis, shows up. Bo knows Bryant's real identity and what really happened in the old investigation. Bo explains that Bryant once saved his life. And when the DEA turned its back on Bryant, Bo was the one who tried to help him.

9:38 Chapter 9: Hector is taken

Then it comes out that Bryant once went undercover inside a prison as an underground cage fighter. He used that identity to get inside the same criminal organization. That operation is what eventually led him to Sonny Kilbane. Now it makes sense why Sonny recognized that fighting style so quickly.

But now, the people connected to Kilbane are coming after Bryant again. And this time, they are using the people around him to get to him. Their first target is Hector. Hector is kidnapped.

Bryant tracks down the vehicle where Hector is being held. He attacks the men guarding him and pulls Hector out of the car. Bryant fights his way through the guards and gets Hector out alive.

But while Bryant is busy saving Hector, Oscar and Marisol are still in danger. The two of them go to Hector's house. And there, they run into people connected to Bryant's old circle. One of them is Eric Green, Bryant's former colleague. Eric seems to be on their side. He tells Oscar that he is looking for Hector and wants to help.

Oscar trusts him. After all, he is one of Bryant's old partners. And that trust is exactly what the criminals were counting on. It turns out the whole thing is a setup. Eric was never there to help. His fake kindness lets the criminals get close enough to grab Oscar and Marisol. Both of them are taken, and they are driven toward the criminal operation connected to the trafficking network.

10:54 Chapter 10: Oscar's secret code

In the car, on the way to the warehouse, Oscar manages to secretly call his brother. But the criminals catch him. They take his phone away from him.

Along the way, Oscar comes up with a trick. He tells the criminals he feels sick and needs to throw up. So they stop and let him out of the car. While he is outside, Oscar spots an address on a building. He quickly memorizes it.

Later, at the warehouse, the criminals want Oscar to bring his brother to them. So they make him text Hector and tell him to come. Oscar realizes this is his one chance to leave Bryant a clue. So along with the message, he sends the address he memorized on the road.

The criminals don't understand why he sent it. They demand to know what it means. Oscar tells them the address is a code that only his brother understands. They believe him. And they have no idea that Oscar has just told Bryant where to look. Not bad for a kid who couldn't even make it to school on time.

Between Oscar's call and that address, Bryant is able to figure out where Oscar is. And Bryant realizes the truth. Oscar and Marisol have been taken to a human-trafficking operation. The same kind of operation Bryant once worked to bring down.

Bryant immediately starts planning a rescue. He tells Hector that he knows where Oscar is. Hector wants in, and he joins him. Bryant also reconnects with his former colleagues. Together, they study the location and work out a plan to get inside. They don't just drive up and start shooting. They set up an ambush. Once the plan is ready, they get into their vehicles and drive toward the trafficking warehouse.

12:22 Chapter 11: Assault on the warehouse

Inside the warehouse, Oscar and Marisol are being held. The criminals know Oscar is valuable because of his connection to Bryant. They are using him as bait. They expect Bryant to come for him. And they are right. But Bryant is ready for them.

When Bryant's team reaches the warehouse, the gunfight begins. Bullets fly everywhere. The criminals shoot from windows, from doorways and from behind cover. Bryant's team fires back as they keep moving forward.

At one point, Bryant and another fighter are pinned down by heavy gunfire. Then Bryant notices something. One of the enemies is hiding behind cover, but his boots are sticking out underneath it. Instead of exposing himself, Bryant shoots straight at the man's feet. That forces him out of hiding.

The fight spreads through the whole warehouse. Bryant moves through the building slowly and carefully, taking the attackers down one by one. And Hector is right there, fighting beside him. Bit by bit, the criminals lose control of their own operation.

Finally, Bryant reaches the men holding Oscar and Marisol. But one of the traffickers gets a clear shot at Bryant. Bryant doesn't see him. Hector does. Hector raises his gun and shoots the man before he can kill Bryant. The same guy who once pulled a gun on Bryant has now saved his life. Hector has gone from someone Bryant had to protect to someone keeping Bryant alive.

13:33 Chapter 12: Eric Green

And now Oscar comes face to face with Eric Green, the man who set him up. Then it comes out that Eric was once Bryant's protégé. Eric betrayed Bryant and helped the criminals use Oscar to find him. Eric believed that because he trained under Bryant, he knew exactly how Bryant thinks.

But Eric made one big mistake. He underestimated Oscar. Because Oscar was trained by Bryant too. The two of them fight, and Oscar uses everything Bryant taught him. And this time, the student wins. Oscar lands a hard punch, and Eric falls to the ground.

But Eric isn't finished. He grabs a gun and points it at Oscar. He is about to shoot. Right then, Marisol grabs a weapon and shoots Eric in the leg first. Eric collapses. And then Bryant finally stands over him.

Eric expects Bryant to kill him right there. But Bryant has already called the authorities. Federal agents are on their way. So Bryant leaves Eric alive, to face the consequences of his betrayal and his part in the criminal operation.

The trafficking operation is finally destroyed. Oscar survives. Marisol survives. Hector survives too. And Bryant has finally faced the criminal organization that forced him to disappear all those years ago.

And there is one more person who comes back into Bryant's life. Heather. The wife he had to leave behind in their old city comes to Mexico to see him. After years of living apart to keep her safe, Bryant finally gets to see her again.

The story comes full circle with Oscar. At the start, he was a troubled kid who was always late to school because he kept stopping to watch Bryant train. His one underground fight, meant to pay off a gas debt, brought Bryant's entire hidden past back to the surface. Bryant taught him how to fight. But more importantly, he taught him discipline and self-control.

By the end, Oscar is no longer just the boy watching from a distance. He has become someone who can use what Bryant taught him to protect himself and the people he cares about. And Bryant, after years of living like he was already dead, finally stops running from his past and finishes the fight he started long ago.

Your corrections are in. These points still came from neither the plot source nor your notes, so confirm them against the movie:

- Piro's visit: the script says Kilbane sees Oscar's fight video during Piro's prison visit. Confirm that this is how Kilbane sees it, and whether Piro is the one who passes the order to the Guzman twins.
- "After they cut him": the script reads this as the criminals catching Oscar on the phone and taking it. If they actually cut him with a knife, add one line in Chapter 10.
- The street chase: the script says Bryant "deals with" the gang members chasing Oscar. If he fights them on screen, say how in one line.
- Bo Davis in the final raid: the script only says Bryant "reconnects with his former colleagues". Name Bo there if he takes part.
- The gas-money woman: the earlier plot source said a woman gave money for gas. Your notes say the gang gave Oscar the gas money, so she was left out.
