01 The plan at a glance

Movie Abyss's views have been low. The fix is not one thing: six areas improve together, starting now.

Movie choice

BEFORE

Picked without a clear system

→ FROM NOW ON

Picked for timing and story. Posted near the streaming release day.

Script

No fixed style

→ FROM NOW ON

One recap style: fast, clear, the whole story, about 15 minutes.

Title

Names the movie

→ FROM NOW ON

Sells the story. "A [hero] [does something], But [twist]".

Thumbnail

Mixed styles

→ FROM NOW ON

One big emotional face, real movie frames, no text.

Editing

BEFORE

Inconsistent

→ FROM NOW ON

Voice never stops. New shot every 3-5 seconds. Quiet music.

Delivery

Late uploads

→ FROM NOW ON

3 videos a week on fixed days, ready 24 hours early.

02 Our two promises

Both start immediately, on 14/10/2026.

Delivery is fixed, starting today

Delivery hasn't been good enough so far. From today, every video follows a fixed weekly schedule. Each finished video is ready at least 24 hours before it goes live, so no publish date is missed.

Tools are no longer an issue

All the tools for scripting, voice-over, editing and thumbnails are now in place. Production will not be held up by missing software or access.

03 The monetization target

To join the YouTube Partner Program, the channel needs both bars full. Type today's numbers from YouTube Studio into the blue boxes.

Subscribers

Goal: 1,000

We are here now:

Watch hours (last 12 months)

Goal: 4,000

We are here now:

The teal bar is illustrative. Your real starting point goes in the boxes.

Alternative to watch hours: 10 million Shorts views in 90 days. Check current rules in YouTube Studio → Earn.

Shorts views in the last 90 days (optional):

WHAT IT TAKES

4,000 hours
of watching

240,000 minutes
= $4,000 \times 60$

÷ 6 minutes
average watched per video

≈ 40,000 views
of long videos in total

≈ 2,000 views
per video, across ~20 videos

03 The deadline, honestly

November is ambitious if the channel starts from a low base. One or two breakout videos make the difference.

Why the plan can still work

- Most videos get a few thousand views. One or two hits (this niche sees 80K-211K) can deliver most of the 40,000 views needed.
- That's why every video is packaged to have breakout potential.
- Checkpoint on 8 November: we compare the numbers to the target and adjust movie choice and upload count if we're behind.

04 Movie choice: timing is everything

People search for a recap in the days after a movie reaches streaming. We post inside that window.

- Script is written before release, using the trailer, synopsis and early plot information, then finished on release day.
- A movie that's been out for weeks only works if people are still searching for it.

04 Movie choice: the 7-point check

Tick all seven before a movie is chosen. Then pick from the shortlist on the next slide.

1 Timing

On streaming in the next 3-14 days.

☐ Checked

2 Good story

One hero, rising danger, a twist, a strong ending.

☐ Checked

3 Searchable

Known star, franchise, director or viral moment.

☐ Checked

4 Thumbnail

One frozen moment that sells the whole movie.

☐ Checked

5 Not crowded

Few big recap channels have covered it.

☐ Checked

6 Fits the channel

Survival, action-thriller, revenge, horror.

☐ Checked

7 Safe for ads

Not mostly sexual content or harm to children.

☐ Checked

All 7 ticked?

Add it to the shortlist and set a publish date.

04 The first shortlist

October–November 2026. Confirm each date on the streaming platform before scheduling. Tick when done and type the publish date.

The Death of Robin Hood

HBO Max · 16 Oct

FIRST PICK. Dark medieval outlaw story, close to the niche's 211K hit.

05 Script: the shape of every video

About 3,000 words (15 minutes at 200 words a minute), split into 8-12 chapters. No intro: the first sentence starts the story.

How it sounds

PRESENT TENSE, PLAIN ENGLISH

“Troy wakes up in a snowy forest. A masked man is standing over him with a gun.”

EXPLAIN WHY IT MATTERS

“...which is punishable by death. That means Nick can never go back.”

CLEAR TWIST LINES

“And here it comes out that the priest was the one who created him.”

05 Script checklist

Tick every line for every script before it goes to the voice-over.

No intro or greeting. The first sentence starts the story.

Real numbers from the movie: years, distances, ages.

Opens with the most dramatic moment, then “The story goes back to...”

Clear twist lines: “And here it comes out that...”

Plain spoken English, present tense (“Troy wakes up...”).

Covers the whole movie including the ending. No opinions or reviews.

One event per sentence. The story never stops moving.

About 3,000 words, 8–12 chapters with plain names.

Says why things matter straight away (“That means...”).

Written fresh. Nothing copied from other channels or summaries.

06 Titles: the formula

Sell the story, not the movie. The most-viewed titles in this niche never include the movie name, year, actors, “recap” or “explained”.

REAL EXAMPLE FROM THE NICHE: 211,000 VIEWS

The World Calls Him a Hero, But This Dying Outlaw Knows He Was a Murderer and Gets...

Movie Abyss · mock-up

How our Robin Hood title would look on YouTube. The “...” cut makes people click.

Connector words

But

So

Where

When

Not Knowing

After

Until

Strong words: Brutal, Secretly, Every, Entire, Mysterious, Accidentally

06 Title checklist

Tick every line for every title. Example for our first movie is at the bottom.

Starts with a label, not a name: “A Poor Farmer”, “An Ex-Soldier”.

One exact number (10,000 Men, 12 Hours) and one strong word.

Two parts: a setup, then a bigger, crazier second half.

Title Case, 90–115 characters, best words in the first 70.

Has irony or scale: an ordinary person, a huge outcome.

Everything in it really happens in the movie.

EXAMPLE: THE DEATH OF ROBIN HOOD

“The World Calls Him a Hero, But This Dying Outlaw Knows He Was a Murderer and Gets One Last Chance at Salvation”

Written from the official synopsis. Updated with the real twist once the movie has been watched.

07 Thumbnails: do this, not that

Clean, cinematic and emotional, built from real movie frames. No text: the title does the talking.

✓ DO

Big emotional face, crowd behind, one hook object (the bow), movie-poster colours, no text.

✗ DON'T

Captions, stickers, arrows and emojis. That's a short-form style, not this niche's cinematic look.

07 Thumbnails: the layout

Every thumbnail is built the same way. Tick the checklist for each one.

- 1 Main face: 30–40% of the frame, extreme emotion
- 2 Reacting people or a crowd, for scale
- 3 Hook object that makes people curious

- ☐ No text, arrows, emojis or logos.
- ☐ One big emotional face (30–40%).
- ☐ 1–3 reacting people or a crowd.
- ☐ One hook object.
- ☐ Blood, dirt or sweat if the genre allows.
- ☐ Warm skin, teal background, deep blacks, 16:9.
- ☐ Matches the title: one story together.
- ☐ Real movie frames, not AI faces of real actors.

08 Editing: what sits on the timeline

The first 60 seconds of a video in the editor. The voice never stops, the picture changes every 3–5 seconds.

15 cuts in 60 seconds = a new shot about every 4 seconds. Each shot shows exactly what the voice is saying at that moment.

08 Editing: sound levels across the whole video

Voice on top at full volume. Music underneath, rising only at big moments. Movie sound off except for 1–2 seconds.

VOICE

Calm, clear, ~200 words a minute

CLIPS

New shot every 3–5 seconds

MOVIE SOUND

Muted, except key moments

MUSIC

Royalty-free, 15–20%

ON SCREEN

Clean frame. No captions or stickers

LENGTH

12–16 minutes (ads from 8 min)

EXPORT

1080p or 4K, 16:9, chapters in description

08 Shorts and copyright

Shorts bring new subscribers. Copyright is the biggest risk to getting monetized.

One 15-minute recap

2-3 Shorts per video, cut from our own narrated recap. Each ends with a reason to watch the full video. Shorts views don't count towards the 4,000 watch hours.

Copyright rules

- YouTube checks recap channels for reused content. Our narration over every second of footage is what makes the videos original.
- Short clips only. Never the movie's own sound or music as the soundtrack.
- A Content ID claim usually means the studio takes that video's ad money. A strike is serious: three strikes and the channel is removed.
- The copyright tab is checked after every upload. Problems are reported the same day.

09 Delivery: the same 6 steps for every video

3 long videos every week (Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday), plus Shorts. Each video is ready at least 24 hours before it goes live.

A TYPICAL WEEK (a video can move to land on a movie's streaming release day)

10 The 7-week roadmap

14 October to 30 November 2026. Tick each week when it's done.

Week 4 and Week 7 (amber) are the decision points: the checkpoint, and applying for monetization.

11 Weekly report

Every week, David Alozie gets these numbers from YouTube Studio. Fill in a column each week.

NUMBER	AIM	WEEK 1	WEEK 2	WEEK 3	WEEK 4	WEEK 5	WEEK 6	WEEK 7
Subscribers (total)	→ 1,000
Watch hours (12 months)	→ 4,000
Click-through rate %	above 5%
Avg view duration %	above 35-40%
Videos on time (of 3)	3 of 3
Copyright strikes	zero
